WINTER 1993

Taylor Athletic Field Named for Alumna

ON OCTOBER 17, 1992 — AS PART OF ALUMNAE COUNCIL — LASELL celebrated the dedication of Taylor Field, named to honor devoted alumna Dorothy Hagadorn Taylor '25 for her bequest intention.

"We are pleased to recognize Mrs. Taylor's zeal for life, her commitment to Lasell, and her enthusiasm for the sports she so dearly loves, by naming the field in her honor," said President Thomas E.J. de Witt.

Mrs. Taylor sees her gift by bequest as a way to provide for her beloved Lasell in a way which otherwise would not have been possible during her lifetime. She encourages others to support the College in a similar way.

At the dedication, Lynn Blodgett Williamson '46, honorary chair of the Heritage Society, spoke about the meaning of such special contributions. "Lasell students of today and the future will benefit from the thoughtful and generous gifts of alumnae such as Dorothy Hagadorn Taylor.

Whether large or small, these gifts combined ensure that Lasell will be able to meet the educational needs of women tomorrow as it did for us in our day."

Attending the dedication as a surprise to Mrs. Taylor were friends from her hometown in Connecticut, and Lasell friends and classmates. As part of the ceremony, the Orphean Club performed and soccer team captain Donna Wolff '93 presented Mrs. Taylor with a Lasell sweatshirt, dubbing her an honorary member of the team.

"I am so proud to be honored by Lasell in this way. Today is one of the happiest days of my life," said Mrs. Taylor.

Dorothy Hagadorn Taylor '25

When she was at Lasell, Dorothy Hagadorn Taylor was involved in nearly every extracurricular activity — but especially sports. She was on both the field hockey and crew teams, and she still remembers playing baseball on the very field that now carries her name. Today, at age 87, she is still an avid golfer and at the top of her bowling league. ♦

Spring Alumnae College to Focus on Women's Equality in the Workplace

AFTERNOON WORKSHOP TO OFFER ROAD MAP TO INDIVIDUAL DECISION-MAKING STYLES

ARE WOMEN TRULY EQUAL IN THE WORKPLACE, OR IS THERE A "GLASS CEILING" THAT prevents them from accessing higher level positions? And how are individual decision-making styles affecting relationships at home and in the office? These issues will be the focus of two sessions during Alumnae College this spring.

"The Glass Ceiling: Discrimination in the Workplace" will be the topic of a roundtable discussion in the morning at the next Alumnae College on Saturday, April 3, 1993. Members of Lasell's Board of Trustees, Board of Overseers, faculty, alumnae, and students will be the panelists. Friends from the local business community will also participate. Among the 15 panelists will be:

Doreen Thompson, senior vice president of The Weber Group;
Deborah Masules, vice president of human resources at Filene's Basement;
Daniel Reidy, C.A.E., executive director of the Massachusetts Association of Electrical Contractors; and

Gene Hartigan, executive director of the Massachusetts Republican Party.

The program will be moderated by students and Richard Bath, director of the Fashion Merchandising and Retail Management programs.

The roundtable, a version of one held last spring for the College, will feature candid observations from each panelist and role-playing scenarios. It is sponsored by the Fashion Merchandising and Retail Management programs, the Alumnae Office, and the Student Services Office.

From the Editor

TODAY, THREE YEARS AFTER ITS SUCCESSFUL transition to a four-year institution, Lasell College is an exciting center of learning where educational innovation and entrepreneurship are cultivated and encouraged. To reflect that spirit we have redesigned the Lasell Leaves and added something new. The four-page supplement, called Lasell College Today, is designed to give readers a close-up look at some of the exciting people, programs, activities, and innovations which contribute to Lasell's success.

We welcome your comments on our new look and encourage you to write to us with suggestions about stories you'd like to see.

Classes Get Ready to Celebrate Reunion Weekend

ALUMNAE WHO GRADUATED IN YEARS ENDING in a "3" or an "8" are gearing up to celebrate Reunion Weekend, June 4-6, 1993. We're particularly looking forward to welcoming the classes of 1943 and 1968 back to campus for their 50th and 25th Reunions, respectively.

The celebration begins on Friday, June 4, with check-in and registration at Haskell House. The Lasell bookstore, located in the Edwards Student Center, will be open for shopping, and you're encouraged to take a leisurely walk around campus to see Lasell's changes and improvements -- such as The Barn, now home to a day care center; Crosby's, the commuter lounge in Gardner House; and the Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center, formerly Carter Hall.

After the Welcome Supper on Friday evening, we'll travel to Boston for the traditional Lasell Night at Pops. For those not attending, we'll have an after-dinner social and movie in the Student Lounge.

Guided tours of campus will be offered throughout Saturday morning, June 5, and we'll have you back in plenty of time for class meetings and group photos. We're prepared for lots of reminiscing and chatting before President de Witt and Alumnae Association President Joy Stewart Rice '55 address all Reunioners at the Reunion Luncheon for All Classes, which will be held in Valentine Hall. Honored will be the classes with the largest percentage of participation in the Annual Fund and with the largest total gift to the Annual Fund. As part of the luncheon, the President will award Lasell

Medallions and draw the winning raffle tickets for "Not Your Ordinary Raffle."

On Saturday afternoon, Associate Professor and Director of the Early Childhood/Elementary Education program Paula Panchuck will present an Alumnae College session titled, "Liking the Woman You've Become." The workshop will examine attitudes and myths regarding women and aging, and will explore ways of thinking about self-worth and self-confidence as part of the aging process -- no matter what your age.

The highlight (we've been told!) of the whole weekend is always the special anniversary dinner at the President's home for alumnae from the classes of 1918-1943 and their guests. Reunioners from the classes of 1948-1988 will be treated to Nostalgia Night, an informal dinner/dance complete with a D.J. and held in Winslow Hall.

Even if you can't make it back to Lasell for the entire weekend, you won't want to miss Saturday's events. After all, seeing your friends and catching up on the years is what Reunion is all about.

Reunion invitations with all the details will be mailed from the Alumnae Office in March. Reservation forms are due by May 15, 1993. If you don't receive information by April, please call the office at (617) 243-2141. ☀

"Not Your Ordinary Raffle" To Benefit Student Scholarships

THIS YEAR, IN AN EFFORT TO BOOST THEIR MODEST SCHOLARSHIP FUND AND HOPEFULLY AWARD larger scholarships to more students, the Board of Management of Lasell Alumnae, Inc., has chosen to run an extensive raffle. Proceeds from "Not Your Ordinary Raffle," a raffle extraordinaire, will benefit the student scholarship fund.

The Board of Management's scholarship fund annually grants awards to Lasell women who have demonstrated their ability as scholars and who have made a difference within the Lasell community. These scholarships are very competitive and the committee must narrow the pool of applicants to approximately 15 candidates to be interviewed. This past year, after two weeks of interviewing students, the association granted 10 financial awards from their nominal scholarship fund. The raffle was created specifically to raise funds to help Lasell students pay for their education.

Prizes for "Not Your Ordinary Raffle" came from trustees, alumnae, and friends, and most are valued at $100 minimum. Included among the more than 30 valuable prizes are: a weekend at a Marriott hotel, courtesy of trustee Colin Nadeau, the Northeast region vice president of Marriott Hotels; a gold necklace from Hills Jewelers in Sudbury, Massachusetts; an Oriental rug courtesy of trustee emeritus Arthur T. Gregorian and his son, John, in Newton, Massachusetts; a gift certificate from The Baby Place of Natick, Massachusetts, owned by Susan Young Charton '69; theatre tickets from trustee

John Leonard, vice president of theatre marketing for General Cinemas; a beauty basket of Estee Lauder products courtesy of Sharon LeVan '66, a senior vice president at the firm; and an Orrefors bowl from Neiman Marcus, thanks to trustee William Roddy, vice president and general manager of the Boston store. A complete listing of the prizes is printed on the back of the ticket.

A book of tickets sells for $20; one ticket is $5. If you purchase a book of tickets before March 31, 1993, we will give you one free ticket, which means you'll get six tickets for the price of four individual tickets -- and an extra chance to win one of the great prizes.

The drawing will be held during Reunion weekend in June 1993. Winners need not be present to win; prizes will be shipped to out-of-state winners. Tickets, which will be sold until June 5, 1993, were mailed to alumnae and friends in Massachusetts and to several other areas throughout the country. If you would like to participate in this worthwhile effort (and we hope you will!), please call Mary Tiernan in the Alumnae Office at (617) 243-2141. Remember, all proceeds directly benefit the scholarship fund! ☀

Nominations Accepted for Lasell Medallion

EACH YEAR, A COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY the Alumnae Association's Board of Management selects individuals to receive the Lasell Medallion, the association's highest honor. Nominations for the 1993 award, which will be presented at the Reunion luncheon on Saturday, June 5, 1993, are due by March 1, 1993.

The Lasell Medallion was created in 1968 to honor outstanding members of the Lasell community. The bronze award may be given to "any member of the Lasell family, who by virtue of distinguished service to the College or to society at large, has brought added honor to the name Lasell."

The medallions are the gift of Mr. Chester Lasell, the grandson of Josiah Lasell, who was co-principal of Lasell Seminary with his brother and College founder Edward Lasell.

Please send your nominations to Linda Telfer '60, Medallion Committee Chairwoman, Lasell College, Office of Alumnae Affairs, 1844 Commonwealth Avenue, Newton, MA 02166. You may fax your nomination by calling (617) 243-2389. *

Graduates Return for Alumnae College and Council

LASELL COLLEGE WELCOMED MORE THAN 60 WOMEN BACK TO CAMPUS FOR an informative Alumnae College and Council, the Alumnae Association's annual meeting, on October 17, 1992.

The day, devoted to Lasell alumnae, began early with the Alumnae College, which consisted of two morning-long workshops led by members of the Lasell community. Both were more detailed forums than previously held and introduced new topics pertaining to women and their interests and common concerns.

One offering examined the issue of women and self-image, and was presented by Dr. Patti Levin '68, a clinical instructor in psychology at Harvard Medical School and a clinical psychologist in private practice in Boston, and Dr. Nancy Stechler, a staff psychologist at a local community clinic and a clinical psychologist in private practice in Sharon, Mass. They led the participants in a discussion of the ways self-esteem affects a woman's relationships with others and focused on how a woman can value herself to the fullest.

focuses on topics pertaining to women, their interests, and common concerns.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

The Allerlei

YET ANOTHER VALUABLE HISTORICAL ITEM WAS contributed to Lasell's Archives, when a gentleman in York, Maine, sent us a copy of the very first yearbook of Lasell Seminary, the Allerlei for 1890-91. The College did not have this particular yearbook in its collection.

The small, white, hardbound book of 115 pages has many hand-drawn illustrations by the artist Philip A. Butler, whose watercolor paintings purchased by Dr. Bragdon had decorated the walls of the dining room in Bragdon Hall. Only one of these landscapes remains; it hangs in the Brennan Library.

This first Allerlei was named at a time when the German influence on American education was pervasive. "Allerlei" means "of all kinds" and suggests a gathering together of various aspects of student life during the four years of their time at Lasell.

In those days there were always four classes, including the last two of high school and the first two of college. It is interesting to note that by far the majority of students came from outside New England, particularly from Illinois — no doubt because Dr. Bragdon came from Evanston and had many connections in the Chicago area. Pupils came from as far away as Texas, California, Louisiana, and Colorado.

The book is dedicated by the editors to the "Future Editors of the Allerlei and the Lasell World." There are lists of eight trustees and 30 faculty members, a brief history of Auburndale, many poems, a menu, the S.D. Society and the Lasellia Club (with their secretive and elaborate insignia), all the many clubs including the Orphean Club and the Juniata Club (canoeing), and of course, the Lasell Battalion with its three Captains of separate companies. This first Allerlei contains only seven pages of advertisements at the beginning and seven more at the end, for such things as millinery, candy, and especially pianos. No doubt they helped pay for publication. The general tone of the book is light and humorous, yet with obvious enthusiasm for the four years as students. One of the most revealing for a modern reader is the account of a "Trip to Boston," which shows how totally regimented and controlled the pupils were in those days. A delightfully detached view is revealed in an account, "Monday Musings," as a student views from the school the approach of sophisticated young men from Harvard or callow "Exeter boys."

Mr. Andrew T. Furlong, Jr., of York, Maine, purchased this rare book at a fair and sent it to Lasell, although he has no connection to the College. We are most grateful to him and to others in the past, both alumnae and strangers, who have, with thoughtful generosity, given the Lasell Archives valuable items we have formerly lacked.

Having received this choice gift for the Archives, we now hope that some of the following yearbooks will be found to fill in the gaps. We have only 15 of the yearbooks between 1890 and 1923, when the Lamp was first published. The missing years are 1892, 1900-1902, 1904-1907, 1910-1914, and 1916-1922. Of course, it may be that during World War I such books were not published. We have heard from Harriette Case Bidwell '22 that her class book was called the Meow. The Alumnae Office would be pleased to talk with anyone about the possibility of finding any of these rare books. *

IN MEMORIAM:

MARVINE "TEX" WEATHERBY '41 HERITAGE SOCIETY MEMBER

CARING FOR OTHERS — PERSONALLY AND MEDICALLY — WAS a theme throughout the life of Dr. Marvine "Tex" Weatherby '41, who passed away in 1992. Although she was a retired doctor, she remained committed to establishing a cleaner, safer environment.

After leaving Lasell — where she was listed in the Senior Hall of Fame as "most versatile" and "most personality" — she attended the University of Texas in Austin and graduated in 1944 with a degree in bacteriology. During World War II, Dr. Weatherby served in the WAVES Hospital Corp of the U.S. Navy, working as a laboratory technologist and bacteriologist. In 1953, she received her M.D. degree from Texas Medical School and remained at the Medical Branch Hospitals for a residency in pathology.

Dr. Weatherby retired in 1973. She moved to a developing retirement area in Costa Rica, but returned to the United States when she became ill because of the spraying of pesticides in the area's rice fields.

She returned to Texas to live on the family ranch, where she conducted research in organic farming and raised cattle that produce chemical-free beef. Weatherby Clean Beef, Inc., a wholesale and retail company she helped found, sells natural organic meat with no steroids, antibiotics, pesticides, preservatives, or additives.

A recipient of a Lasell Medallion, she had served the College as a trustee from October 1986 until October 1991 when she resigned due to illness. She joined her classmates in celebrating their 50th Reunion at Lasell in 1991. It was a particular shock for many to learn that "Tex" passed away on April 8, 1992, of lung cancer. She is missed by all who knew her. ■

Her devotion to Lasell never wavered ...

In 1987, Marvine "Tex" Weatherby established a charitable remainder unitrust naming Lasell as the ultimate beneficiary. She said, "It is a wonderful feeling to have a unitrust with Lasell. I am not one of the 'very rich' and the trust fits within my means. It gives me a sense of continuity with Lasell and at the same time provides me with income during these retirement years."

She became the first member of the Heritage Society when it was formed in 1991 to honor those who include Lasell in their estate plans.

New Commuter Lounge Named in Honor of Ruth Turner Crosby '42

Lasell was pleased to recognize outgoing chairman of the Board of Trustees Ruth Turner Crosby '42 by naming the newly constructed Commuter Lounge in her honor. Located on the ground floor of Gardner House, the lounge is a home away from home for the College's "day hops." Pictured are Ruth Turner Crosby; 2 commuters, Jennifer Salvati '93 and Ina Rossman, a part-time student; and Dick Crosby.

Spring Alumnae College Focuses on Decision-Making Styles

The afternoon workshop, "Just Your Type: Your Decision-Making Style," will be specifically devoted to Lasell alumnae and be led by Dr. Priscilla Glidden. She is a Lasell Overseer and partner of the MIT Group.

The interactive workshop is designed to help identify your modus operandi and how it differs from those with whom you live and work. For example, do you prefer to deal with facts or with possibilities? Do you take a systematic approach to problem solving or do you usually reach a conclusion based on how you feel about the situation?

Whether dealing with a spouse, boss, or our children, each of us has a subconscious decision-making style. The information you gain in this session will lead to smoother relationships — at home and at work — and help you communicate and negotiate more effectively with others.

Last year, the Alumnae Office staff took part in this workshop and came away eager to share the experience with others. "The workshop was fun, lively, and very insightful," says Helena Hartnett, dean for external affairs. "It helped us to understand how each one of us works and how to appreciate our differences."

The fee to attend the day-long Alumnae College is $25 and includes an informal brunch in Valentine Hall immediately following the morning forum. The fee to attend only one session (either the morning or the afternoon) and brunch is $15.

Additional information will be mailed to alumnae, parents, and friends in the New England area. If you live outside the area and would like to be placed on the mailing list for future Alumnae College events, please contact the Alumnae Office at (617) 243-2141. ■

Report on Club Activities

SEVERAL OF LASELL'S ALUMNAE CLUBS had a busy fall with meetings and activities on both coasts. Beginning the academic year with a bang was the New York City meeting of enthusiastic alumnae, who met on September 24 with President Thomas de Witt and his wife Margaret Ward, Dean for External Affairs Helena Bentz Hartnett, and Director of Alumnae Affairs Mary Tiernan. The group of 30 alumnae had a wonderful, fun-filled evening that started with a sumptuous cocktail reception at the elegant Park Avenue home of Nuny Saporta Grey '61. From there it was on to The Boathouse in Central Park where guests enjoyed reminiscing and lively dinner conversation. The rejuvenated club hasn't formally organized to elect officers. However, there are tentative plans to hold a spring event, possibly a weeknight dinner.

Although the group meets several times independently during the year (more recently to watch the Tall Ships and again at Christmastime) the Cape Cod Club, one of the oldest alumnae clubs in existence, held their annual fall meeting in Mashpee, Massachusetts, with 25 alumnae in attendance. Addressing the group were Director of Alumnae Affairs Mary Tiernan and Michelle Strathie '92, one of Lasell's first baccalaureate graduates and now owner of Cape Cod Cycle Tours, a group that provides bicycle tours for individuals and groups throughout the Cape. A special highlight of the meeting was celebrating the 92nd birthday of Helen Louis Griffin '21. The group, led by President Pamela Johns Barry '49, will hold their spring meeting on May 1, 1993, with Lasell President de Witt.

Dean for External Affairs Helena Bentz Hartnett and President de Witt were on hand for the fall meeting of the Southern California Club, which was held in Oceanside on October 24. The group was especially pleased to have Mary Alice Morgan Schulhof '31 join them again. The club will meet again on March 13 with Allyson Hazel '92, one of Lasell's first baccalaureate graduates who recently relocated to the West Coast.

The Connecticut Valley Lasell Club held their annual meeting on November 7 in Farmington, Connecticut. Led by students Kristine Bell '94 and Sheri Whitney '95, the group opened their luncheon meeting with the Alma Mater and later heard about Lasell as it is today from the students. Also attending from the College were Director of Support Services for Alumnae and Development Jeanne Johnsen '72 and Director of Alumnae Affairs Mary Tiernan. It was a pleasure to have Alice Pratt Brown '29 among the attendees once again.

See the accompanying article for spring meetings — we hope to see many new faces and all of the familiar ones at the upcoming meetings! ☺

Alumnae Career Services Launches Job Networking Program

Alums Asked to Share Job Experiences with Students

IN THE LASELL OFFICE OF CAREER SERVICES WE know it's not enough to get a good education. Graduating students must figure out what kind of job will bring them enjoyment and success. They also need to know how to find and get that job. Helping students to know themselves, to learn job hunting skills, and to locate suitable job openings is the role of Career Services. But we certainly welcome the assistance and support of Lasell alumnae.

Students interested in getting a clear picture of a particular job or the general job market can best be served through a diverse network of alumnae who, in person or by phone, can share their experiences and offer helpful hints about the job hunting process.

If you are an alumna interested in participating in the new Career Services Job Networking Program, please fill out and return the form at left. Sharing your job successes (and mistakes!) will help Lasell women get a jump-start on their wonderful lives.

For more information please call Career Services, 617-243-2125. ☺

Students at Lasell Create Pilot AIDS Awareness Program

C.O.O.L. MEMBERS WORK WITH IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILDREN INC.

IT'S HARD TO AVOID NEWS ABOUT THE GROWING NUMBERS IN THE AIDS EPIDEMIC, particularly among adolescents and young people of college age," says Beth Drucker, a Lasell College sophomore. "But the spread of HIV/AIDS can be prevented." At Lasell, students wanted to do something on campus that would really raise consciousness about the virus and, hopefully, save lives.

According to the Centers for Disease Control, AIDS among newborns has been rising on an average of 38 percent a year in the U.S. Seventy-five-thousand youngsters between 13 and 19 are already infected with HIV.

And, it is estimated that one out of every 300 college students is HIV positive.

Those staggering statistics spurred Drucker and sophomore Andrea Kneeland, along with nine other student members of the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (C.O.O.L.), to spearhead an all-campus AIDS Awareness effort. The program has been developed in collaboration with In the Best Interests of the Children Inc. (ITBIC). This statewide charitable volunteer organization is the sponsor of the Massachusetts Pediatric AIDS Awareness Week and works with hospital- and community-based pediatric AIDS programs to promote awareness and build support for direct care.

"Our active involvement with ITBIC this year opened our eyes to the need for greater AIDS education at our college and in other student communities," says Kneeland. She and her friends secured the approval and participation of Lasell's administration and faculty, and developed a first-of-its-kind, all-campus AIDS Awareness Teach-in, which the students will present as a national model at the C.O.O.L. conference in Illinois, in March.

Lasell's Teach-in, February 10, attracted some of the region's leading pediatric AIDS health care and social service professionals.

Participating in the panel, "AIDS: The Myths, the Fears, the Reality," were:

Geneva Woodruff, Ph.D., Executive Director of the Foundation for Children with AIDS

Maurice Melchiono, R.N., C-F.N.P., Adolescent Coordinator for the Children's Hospital AIDS Program

Thelma Hyatt, Director of Boston City Hospital's Children's AIDS Program

Rev. Kim Crawford Harvie, Senior Minister of the Arlington Street Church

Stephen Sarikas, Ph.D., Lasell Assistant Professor of Science.

Kerri Heffernan, Ed.D., Lasell Assistant Professor and director of the College's Women's Health Education Program and faculty coordinator for C.O.O.L.

Included in the day-long schedule was a student-made video in which children, teenagers and adults are interviewed about AIDS. A display of panels from the Names Quilt and a performance of the play "Living On," with professional actors from Boston's New Theatre, were also part of the program. Lasell students will chronicle their AIDS Awareness Teach-in efforts in a handbook which ITBIC will distribute nation-wide to assist students in increasing AIDS awareness on their campuses. ♦

Children at Lasell's "Barn" make cards for children in Bangladesh.

Tots at Lasell Child Study Center Help Cyclone-Torn School in Bangladesh

LAST SPRING, SMALL HANDS REACHED across the continents in a demonstration of caring when children at the Barn, one of two Child Study Centers at Lasell, responded to a devastating cyclone that struck Bangladesh by offering what they could to help a sister school in Tangail, Bangladesh.

The cyclone, which claimed more than 100,000 lives and left a wake of devastation, did serious damage to the Uttaran Shisu Shikhalaya School, which means 'bright children's place.'

"Everyone here followed the news from Bangladesh very closely," said Shirley Vara Gallerani '53, who is the Director of Lasell's Child Study Centers. "But the tragedy was brought home to us all the more because the principal at the Uttaran Child Center is the sister of one of our staff members."

Lasell's "Barn" provides day care for children from infancy to pre-kindergarten for 65 families in the Newton area, and serves majors in the Early Childhood Education program as an on-campus professional learning site.

The tiny tots and teachers at the Barn mobilized their own mini-relief effort by sending crayons, puzzles, paint sets, paper, music cassettes, pencils, books, school supplies and money to the school, which cares for some 135 children, ages five to eight.

Faculty member Barbara Fitzsimmons worked with some 20 Early Childhood Education majors to create developmentally appropriate toys and games out of recycled materials which could be sent to Bangladesh.

Lasell's response to the Uttaran Child Center helped speed the Center's reopening, and gave their children and teachers a welcome sense of encouragement and support.

"The sister school relationship is very valuable for all of us," said Gallerani. "It has enabled us to build connections, children to children, foster understanding between peoples, and has given us the opportunity to be socially responsible and realize the strong similarities we share," Shirley Gallerani explains. ♦

Children from the Uttaran Center sent this drawing of their natural scenery to their newfound friends at Lasell.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The Power of Women's Education

THE NUMBERS ARE COMPELLING. ALTHOUGH LESS THAN two percent of women who graduate from college graduate from a women's college, nearly a third of all Fortune 500 women on boards of directors are products of women's colleges. The reason? Women's colleges — and certainly Lasell — offer the kind of educational environment that promotes learning and personal development.

There is ample evidence that in kindergarten and grades one through three, young girls believe they are going to conquer the world and that they are equal to if not better than anybody. Unfortunately, by the time they reach grades 11 and 12, many of those same girls lose that vision. What has happened? Why have they set their sights lower when boys haven't?

The statistics reinforce the argument that women do better on average when they have the opportunity to study in a setting less pressured by the conventional mores of having men in the classroom. At Lasell, we know from experience that women do not respond as well to competition as they do to connections.

For me, seeing confident young graduates come forward to claim their diplomas each year underscores the fact that women who go to women's colleges find stronger, fuller, richer, more self-assured voices. They are less defined by others and more by themselves.

The College's unique concept of "connected learning," the on-going process of reinforcing theory and knowledge through application, infuses every aspect of the academic and social life at Lasell. Through participatory classroom engagements, our students learn how to learn and are excited by the process because they have a context in which to understand the relevance of what they have learned.

In the classroom, and at our on-campus, professional "connected learning" sites — including the Lasell Inn, and the Lasell College Travel Agency — students apply their new-found classroom learning in a reality-based work environment and experience the satisfaction of accomplishing in the concrete what they have learned in the abstract through lectures and readings.

In our student-as-learner and teacher-as-coach approach to education, both students and teachers flourish. For our faculty — no longer unapproachable figures at the front of the class — the satisfaction comes from introducing students to new disciplines and guiding them through the completion of assignments and tasks. For students, the joy is in empowering themselves, and understanding that knowledge and its applications translate into useful and productive lives.

A single-sex educational environment may not be right for every college-bound woman, but there is a population for whom it offers a wonderful opportunity.

Some of the most powerful and articulate women today — including the new First Lady — attended women's colleges. As graduates they leave college strong and self-assured, better prepared to work with men and better able to deal with themselves and their competition.

Thomas E. J. de Witt, Ph.D.

Satisfaction! Lasell College Gets High Marks in Student Survey

STUDENT SATISFACTION WITH THE OVERALL EXPERIENCE AT LASELL IS at an impressive 93 percent, according to a survey which sampled 256 students last spring.

The survey, designed to measure student satisfaction with academic and campus life, was distributed to Lasell freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, full-time and part-time students, and representatives of nearly every program of study at the College.

The results indicated that 93 percent of surveyed students considered their overall experience at Lasell in the range of acceptable to excellent, and 92 percent declared overall services as acceptable to excellent.

Quality of teaching pulled 92 percent of acceptable to excellent responses.

"Our highest percentage of 'excellent' responses was for faculty availability," reports Kate O'Connor, M.Ed., dean of enrollment management, whose office oversees all student services, including admissions, student development, student financial planning, career services, counseling, health center, food services, and residential life. "Quality of teaching pulled 92 percent of acceptable to excellent responses.

"The overall high level of satisfaction wasn't really a surprise to us, but it was nice to get the confirmation from the students," says O'Connor. "It was a wonderful pat on the back."

The survey also helped Lasell identify areas in which the College needs to spend more effort. "Quality-of-life issues are important to our students. Respondents indicated they wanted a better-defined student center. Our response was to expand the student center by creating a club-like environment, exclusively for students, that will include a game room with pool table, and give students their special space," O'Connor explains. Some students were unclear about the services offered by the Health Center, "so, we promptly posted hours and types of services available."

The survey was created to "better understand the needs of students and to ensure that we aren't neglecting their interests," O'Connor explains. "In addition, we wanted to educate students about the array of services which are available at Lasell. As an institution we are very proud of how dynamic, alive and responsive the administration, faculty and staff are to the needs of our student body. The survey provided us with valuable two-way communication."

Women Students and Math Anxiety— One Teacher's Response to Breaking the Cycle

"GOTTA RUN," SAID WORK-STUDY STUDENT KRISTINE BELL, A LASELL COLLEGE junior, as she finished her assignments in the Office of External Affairs and packed up her books. "I've got an exam in calculus."

"An exam in what?" we asked, surprised by the enthusiasm in her voice.

"Calculus," she said confidently, racing out the door to her class.

The fear and loathing so often attributed to math in all its permutations by women students is notably missing from the majority of the population at Lasell. One of the primary reasons is a teacher named Joanna Kosakowski.

An Assistant Professor of Mathematics and the College's Math/Science Coordinator, Joanna Kosakowski has made a career at Lasell of destigmatizing the subject for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors. Her approach is so successful that her classes in algebra, calculus, and statistics are frequently over-subscribed. For many, for whom she makes math understandable, Professor

Connected Learning at Lasell College

A CONVERSATION WITH THE DEAN OF ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

Cathy Livingston Ph.D., Dean of Academic Affairs

IN EDUCATION, AS WITH ANYTHING ELSE, YOU GET AS GOOD AS YOU GIVE.

That's why the interactive approach of teaching at Lasell has been as exciting and rewarding for faculty as it has been for students.

We talk a lot on this campus about "connected learning." It's a concept that takes on its own life in the classroom, where the connection builds between teacher and student, and student and institutional resources. It's the chance we give our students to observe and apply early in their studies the theories that they are learning in the classroom. It's the opportunity to take risks safely, without the penalty of failure.

For me, the measure of successful teaching is seeing students gain confidence in their abilities to navigate through complex tasks and solve problems. In math it may be the student's ability to conquer equations. In literature it might be seeing them get excited about reading something beautiful, or writing about it. In science it might be that all of a sudden they're not afraid to ask questions about something to which they don't have answers. That's the sign that they've begun to think, inquire, show curiosity. To know that you have been instrumental in that journey of discovery is a wonderful thing indeed.

That satisfaction is more likely to be sustained when everything around student and teacher connects and supports the effort. At Lasell, we put a high premium on helping freshmen to succeed by placing them accurately. Having a Learning Center that we can send them to when they really need to do work that isn't covered in the class, and where they can go for help so they can achieve their goals, is paramount. Having a counseling service that supports our effort if a student can't focus on her studies because she's got personal issues percolating, is vital.

I guess ours is a holistic approach; the sense of having everything out there that one needs to make a connection with a mind, other than a magic wand.

I think the way women approach the world is so different from how men approach it. At Lasell, we look at women's ways of learning. In the math class I teach, I watch how they encourage each other. I help them recognize the value of that rather than ignoring it or being oblivious to it.

I've asked them to think about why it is important to them and they've responded that it's a feeling that they all want to make it together.

I sat informally with one group one day and said,

For me, the measure of successful teaching is in seeing students gain confidence to navigate through complex tasks and solve problems.

— Dr. Cathy Livingston

"Okay, we all know that Jane works really hard, and I'm concerned that the tests don't really show what she knows. What do you think we should do?"

And they said, "Why not let her take the test again?"

So the student took the exam again and she got an A. I loved the fact that the other students were almost more excited than she was. Once they form a group there is a degree to which they protect each other. For me it is a clue to how to work with them. It's a demonstration of how women learn to grow through their connections with people; how they value those connections and how reluctant they are to put them at risk. □

Kosakowski has become the ultimate antidote to math anxiety.

"I don't accept the premise that women are less prone to be good at math than men," she maintains. "But I do recognize that math can be, and usually is, really hard work. Math is a language and a way of thinking, a component of literacy that is becoming more and more important as the world becomes more technologically oriented. Understanding how to use math is a valuable tool. I love to see women students here master it. To see them open new doors with new-found confidence is as empowering for me as it is for them."

"Girls are allowed to avoid math. In a sense they are excused from it, while boys are encouraged to use it, consciously or not. By the time they get to high school, while half the high school population is female, enrollment in upper level high school math courses is mostly male. It's the reason the majority of women think they come to the table with less math aptitude than men."

She continues, "I don't see any gender differences between women and men in terms of ability.

But it's clear that women are much more reluctant than men to risk giving the wrong answer or being labeled a 'brain.'"

Professor Kosakowski says she helps students master math by "respecting their respective learning styles" and creating an environment in which "there are no secrets and where students are encouraged to take risks because there is no penalty. They can see me thinking aloud, going through a process, modeling their behavior, and coming up with an answer."

"At Lasell, math classes don't match the preconceived notions students bring with them. They work in groups. A problem may have 50 steps and working together allows students to bring different strengths to the team. They put so much energy into working together. And the collaborative approach leaves them more time to see and understand the process. They need to know what the operations are, how variables are related to each other and that, truly, there is no magic, only logic.

"I make my goal clear: to try to engage them and provide them with a road map that will guide them through the sometimes difficult terrain. I teach for mastery," Joanna Kosakowski explains. "I want our students to go as far as they can go based on their abilities, not their limitations." □

Lasell's Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center

A RESTORATION WITH HEART

THE OPENING OF THE NEW YAMAWAKI ART AND Cultural Center — venerable Carter Hall handsomely renovated and restored — was the capstone of a two-year labor of love for architect Jeremiah Eck. "It was an opportunity to honor the past while building for the future," he explains. It was a task he relished.

Yamawaki Art and Cultural Center grew out of $1,600,000 in major gifts from Lasell's sister college in Tokyo, Yamawaki Gakuen Junior College, as well as corporations and parents in the United States and Japan.

A light-filled center of learning and creativity, the Center is designed to allow the return to Lasell of Art as a major, to enhance Lasell's Interior Design and Photography programs, improve the range of campus facilities available for special events and student activities, and encourage involvement and participation on the campus by the community at large. The Yamawaki space also enables Lasell to inaugurate and host an artist-in-residence program. Additionally, Yamawaki reinforces opportunities for Lasell students to expand their cultural diversity through a free-flowing student exchange program with Lasell's Japanese sister colleges, helping to reignite cooperation and strengthen understanding between the two cultures.

The building, a landmark on the Lasell campus, was originally constructed around 1880, as a residence for the president, and was connected to Bragdon Hall, the original edifice of the College. The building became best known for the pool, or "natatorium" as it was called then, the first at any school in the U.S. The transformed Carter Hall, with old pool cemented over, was most recently used for classrooms.

"A Victorian wood frame house which had been cut up, added to and subtracted from as use required, it was a house which no longer had any rhyme or reason to it," recalls Eck, principal of Jeremiah Eck Architects Inc., the Boston firm engaged by the College to remodel the stately structure into a lively campus center for creating and exhibiting art in its many forms.

The multi-purpose auditorium will be completed at a later date.

"My task was to give the building back its heart, to create for it a core and infuse it with light. For us, the goal was to perform a quadruple bypass and give it a new life."

Eck, who cherishes a sensibility for "historical continuity," was in his element. "In most cases, I prefer to rebuild rather than tear down."

A curving staircase and the original mission-oak fireplace with its ornately carved "east or west" mantle insignia intrigued Eck. "It was such a natural to incorporate them into the plans since major funding was coming from Japan." The distinctive space became part of the light, airy art gallery space. The building also contains windowed studios and classrooms, and a sloped auditorium space. "The light," says Eck, both natural and artificial, "gives you a sense of where you are at all times."

Eck describes the final product as a distinctive blend of old and new, "contemporary because of its external shapes and the profusion of windows (70 to 80 in all), but harkening back to the Victorian with its solid presence and clapboard and stucco finish.

"The shape of the old building was nice. The old stairway, the tower, which housed a weathervane whose Latin directional markings are still clearly visible on the inside of the tower; the conical roof, its pitches. There is a lovely timelessness about it which we've retained."

Yamawaki's airy art gallery space.

Yamawaki at night is a campus jewel.
